Foreword

IF, when in after life you search for the gold at the rainbow's end, as did the Spaniards of old, and weary and tired you do not find it, you chance to look backward, as indeed you will, and you find in the mystic rôles of the past, a bit of gold dust here, snatched from time, preserved for you in the memory of friends almost forgotten, events long past, dear things of life, "The Brand" of '26 will also have served.

Lawrence Sullivan Ross

---

IN 1838 in the state of Iowa, Lawrence Sullivan Ross was born. In 1839 his family moved to Texas where he grew to manhood, and as a man was instrumental in shaping Texas' destiny.

He was educated at the University of Alabama. An interesting story is told of Ross' winning distinction while he was at home for the summer vacation from college. He is said to have raised a group of friendly Indians and joined General Van Dorn in a campaign against the Comanches. At the battle fought at Wichita Mountains, Ross' men, thinking that they were being mistaken by Van Dorn's men for Comanches, fell back out of the smoke of battle. "The Boy Captain" with three companions, was left surrounded by the Comanches. As a result, Ross was seriously wounded, and barely escaped with his life. He refused military honors offered him on this occasion and returned to Alabama to finish his education. Later, however, he won lasting distinction by his defeat of the Comanches. It was during this campaign that he rescued Cynthia Ann Parker, who, when a child of nine, was captured by this hostile tribe, and for twenty-five years was lost to the white world.

When the Civil War broke out, Ross entered the Confederate Army as a private. When the war ended, he left the army a Brigadier General, having distinguished himself for his unfaltering courage and bravery. After the war he returned to Texas to enter the public life of the state. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention and of the State Senate. Twice he was elected governor by a large majority. At the expiration of his second term he was appointed president of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas. During this time he refused a place on the Railroad Commission. In 1898 his death occurred.

Perhaps no man, active in public life in Texas, has held higher ideals of education than has Lawrence Sullivan Ross. He himself was a product of an education, gained not only through a college, but through life's greatest experiences. While no man ever reaches the highest goal in life, some men through their worth, their strength, their nobility, go far ahead of their brothers. Such a one was this man. His courage is an inspiration to youth; his outstanding faith in humanity places him among the noblest of men; his achievements make him an inspiration to all young people.

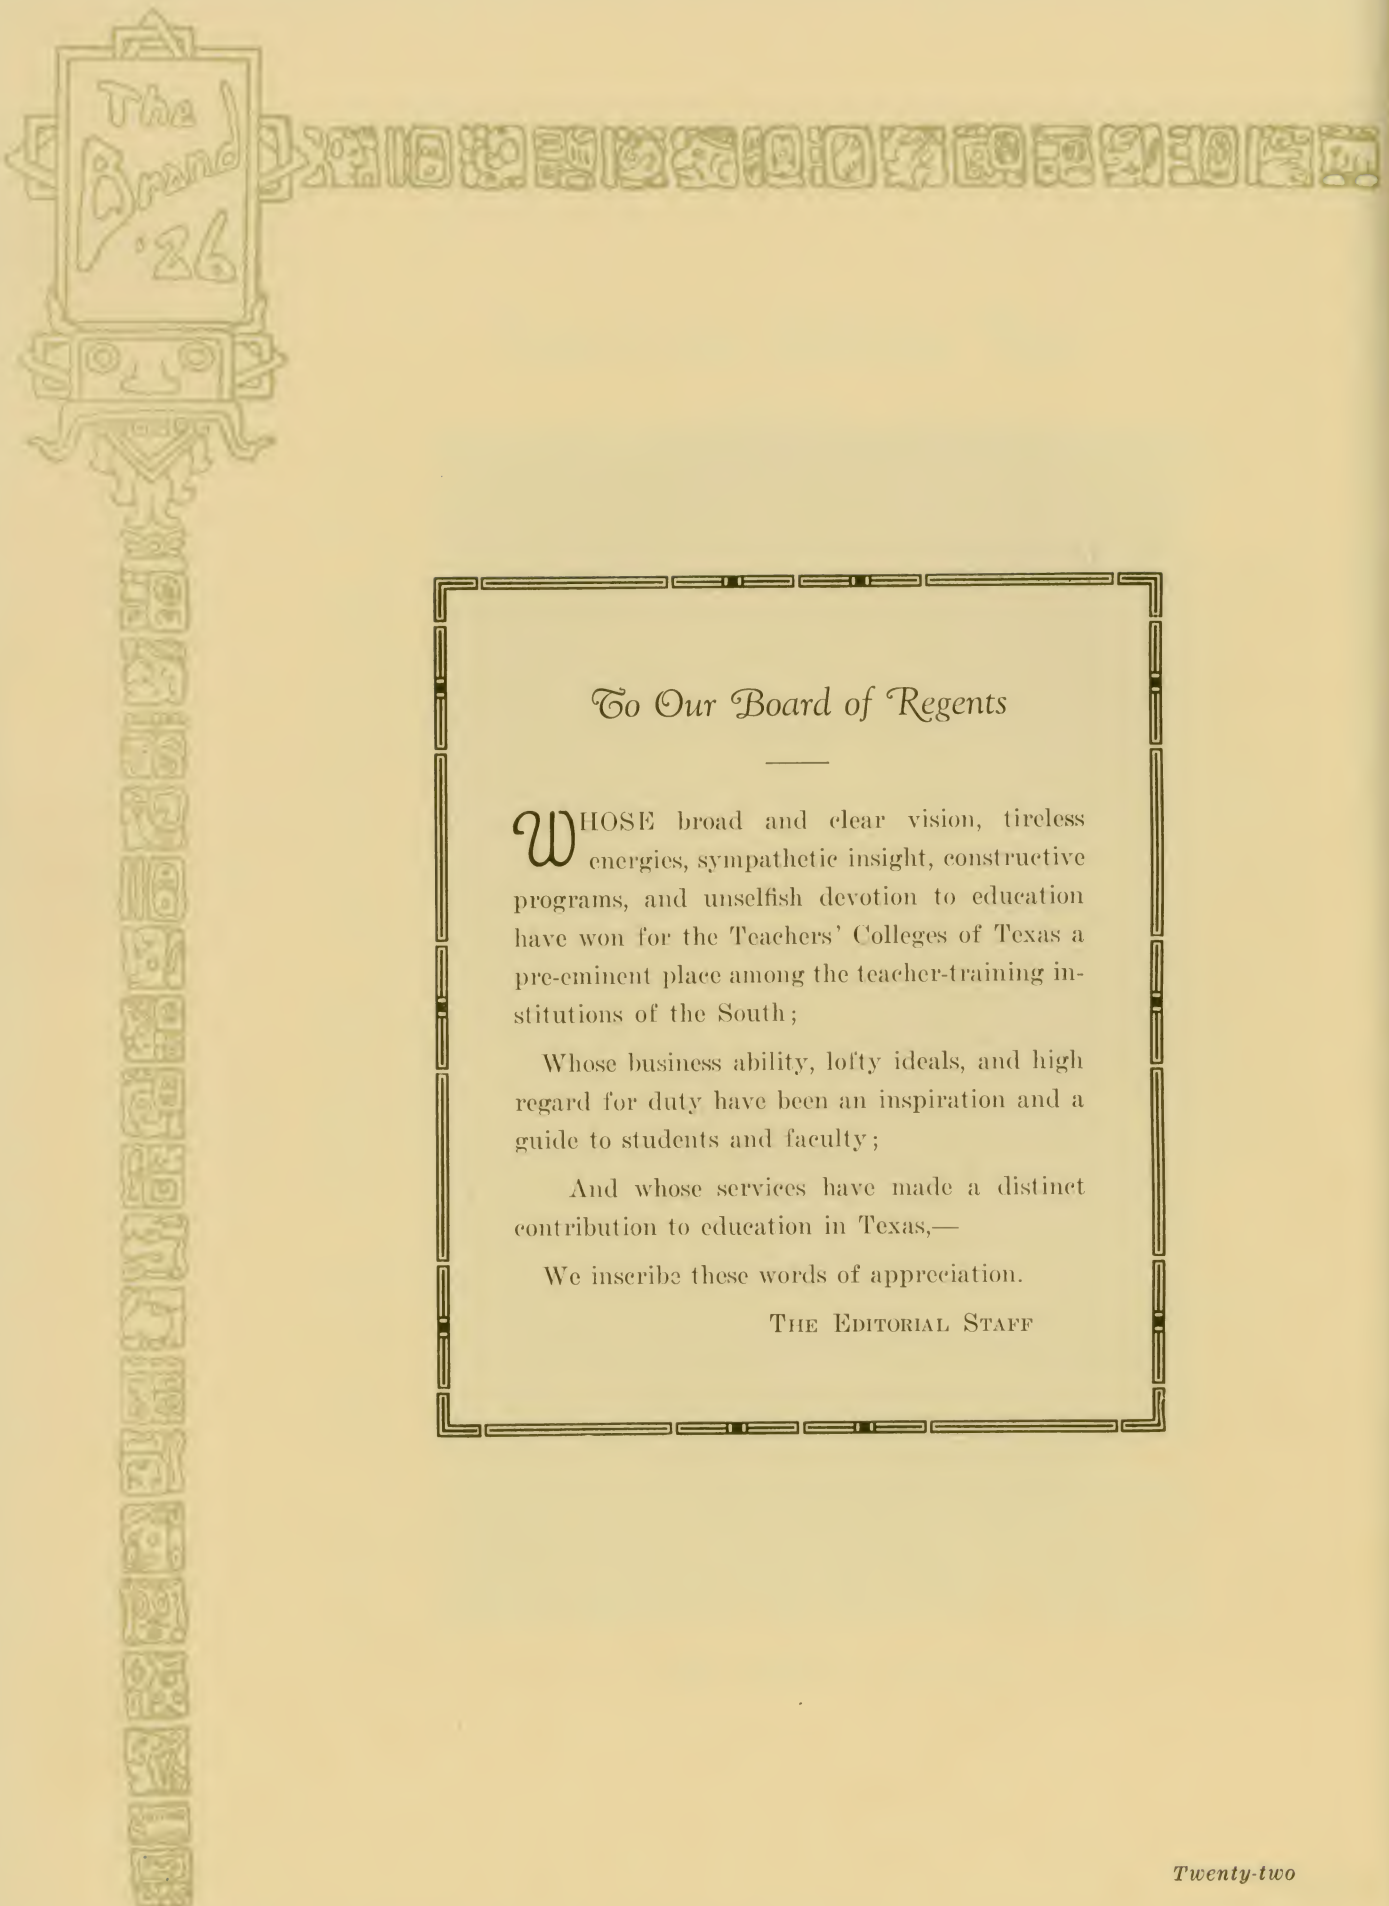

In Southwest Texas, in the Davis Mountains, in a country still young, very rich in beauty and material wealth, the people of Texas have erected a building, a memorial to this man. We are making a college in this building—one that we hope will always be worthy to bear the name it now holds, a college founded upon the dauntless spirit, the high faith, the relentless courage, and the noble aspirations of SUL ROSS.

To Our Students of 1925-1926

Many of you have builded better than you know. This has been a glorious year, and you have contributed largely to making it such. By your splendid spirit in athletics, by your high regard for proper standards, by your un-failing courtesy, and by your consistent devotion to class room duties you have written a chapter in the history of this institution which will be interesting reading matter to those who shall come after you. You have accepted the challenge of college ideals with becoming modesty, and you have turned many of your seeming defeats into potential triumphs; you have made a good investment of your time, your money, and your energy; you have filled with pride the hearts of those who contributed to your success through sacrifice and toil; and you have brought honor to your Alma Mater.

But the discipline you have received through college training will not necessarily insure for you success in life; it is but a means to this end. I trust, therefore, that you will look upon your college days only as the apprentice period to your life work. Let me urge upon you, also, the importance of continuing in college until you have received your degree. A college education pays large dividends not only in dollars and cents, but in the increased capacity to enjoy life.

Sincerely yours,
H. W. Morelock.

I Would Forget

(November 11, 1925)

I've never seen the place where you went down,
And yet—
I think I know the very features
Of Argonne;
Cold moonlight,
Swaying, naked trees
Bowing each to each with lazy winds.
At night I've seen you run,
And calling hoarsely to your men,
Fall over upturned trees,
And rising—fall again.
I wish you'd take the pallor off your face,
And those cold, staring eyes,
Supplant them for your own
If you must come to visit me at times.
My very soul contracts when I see blood,
And yet—
You've let it mat your fine, young hair,
And hide your face, almost, with filthy crusts.
Dear one,
You know my heart;
You've seen the pain you've brought
When you return;

I WONDER IF YOU KNOW THAT I MUST LIVE!

If I Forget

---

If I forget, my dear,
You'll understand—
That far down the coulee
Is a wash-out
With fine white sand
For me to run my fingers through;
And far up the heights
Is a tiny waterfall,
Scarcely big enough to laugh aloud,
And high over all—
And always—
Is the blue sky
God made out of shattered loves;
And grey even' tide
Is shadow things
To hold in memory of yesteryear.
If I forget, my dear,
You'll understand.

CAPTAIN WESLEY TOWNSEND

Coach Bernice C. Graves

---

THE end of the season of 1925-1926 marks the third year that Bernice C. Graves has been the head of the Physical Education Department for men in Sul Ross. A coach of unusual ability, his work has been one of the most interesting bits of athletic history in the Big Bend country and in this section of the state. Personally, he deserves much credit for the excellent spirit of sportsmanship that he has rooted in the hearts of loyal Rossonians, and for the honor and the attention, that as the power behind the Lobo pack, he has brought to the school.

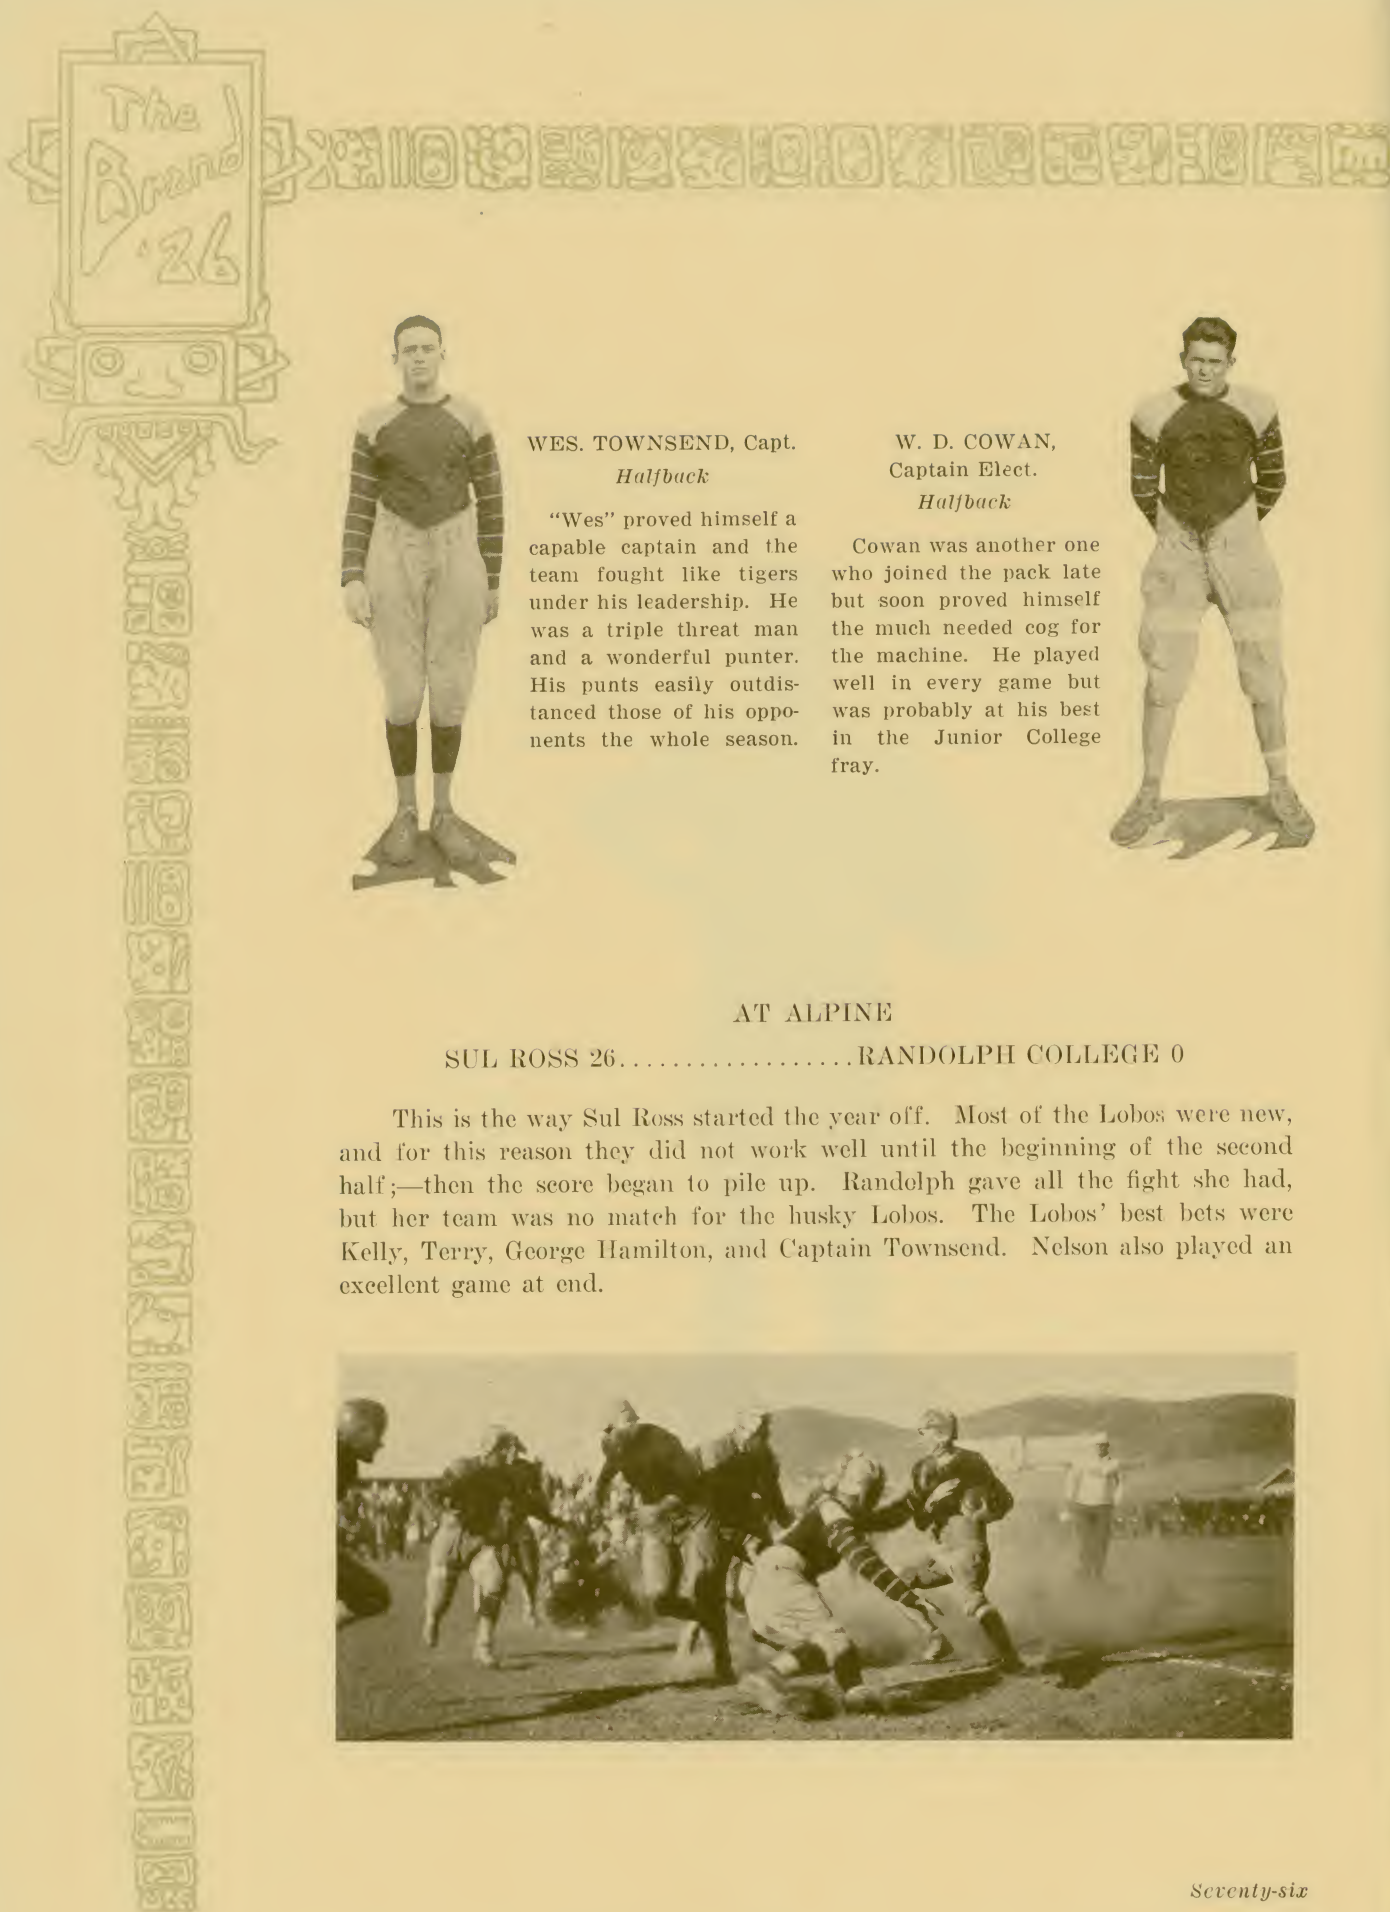

Graves, known to us as "Coach", has always been handicapped by lack of material. However, the first year of his coaching, with very few men, he put out teams that won three-fourths of their games. The second and third years, by dint of much hard work, he produced teams of which any school could be justly proud. The obstacles and disappointments he has met with during these three years have given him no little worry, but with a characteristic never-give-up spirit, he has surmounted or evaded them. As a coach in a pioneer field, he has accomplished what few could have done.

Not only is Graves a good coach, but he is a gentleman and a friend. He is loved by every one with whom he comes in contact, and especially so by the members of his various teams, who have tried him most often and never found him lacking.

COACH BERNICE C. GRAVES

WES. TOWNSEND, Capt.
Halfback

"Wes" proved himself a capable captain and the team fought like tigers under his leadership. He was a triple threat man and a wonderful punter. His punts easily outdistanced those of his opponents the whole season.

W. D. COWAN,
Captain Elect.
Halfback

Cowan was another one who joined the pack late but soon proved himself the much needed cog for the machine. He played well in every game but was probably at his best in the Junior College fray.

AT ALPINE

SUL ROSS 26.....RANDOLPH COLLEGE 0

This is the way Sul Ross started the year off. Most of the Lobos were new, and for this reason they did not work well until the beginning of the second half;—then the score began to pile up. Randolph gave all the fight she had, but her team was no match for the husky Lobos. The Lobos' best bets were Kelly, Terry, George Hamilton, and Captain Townsend. Nelson also played an excellent game at end.

JONAS HAMILTON
Guard

Jonas was a hard fighting guard and he gave all he had in every game. His work against Junior College stood out.

DRURY WOOD
Guard

"Master" is another three year man who has helped to make football history in Sul Ross. He never had an off day but played consistent football in every game.

AT BROWNWOOD

SUL ROSS 0.....DANIEL BAKER 6

This game was the climax of several days bad luck for the Lobos. They were forced to go through four hundred miles of mud to get to the Hillbillies' den. Because of a weakened condition, they had to play a defensive game. The consistent playing of Bozarth, Kelly, and George Hamilton helped much to keep the score as low as it was. The punting of Captain Townsend was a feature of the game.

MAURICE BELL
Quarter

Bell was back this year to fill his old position at quarter, and he more than filled it. His playing in the McMurry game was outstanding.

MARSHALL BOZARTH
Tackle

"Bo" was a tackle and a good one. He played well in every game and seldom was a gain made through his territory. His fierce tackling at Brownwood kept the score low. "Bo" is line captain elect.

AT ALPINE

SUL ROSS 31.....EL PASO MINERS 7

This was the chief game of the season. Every player took his position with a determination to fight and win. The fighting spirit of the Lobos could not be downed and they emerged victorious from the fray. The Miner team was well balanced but was no match for the Lobos. Kelly's spectacular 92 yard sprint for a touchdown was the outstanding feature of the game. The Miners' lone score came as the result of a long end run. Several new Lobos proved their ability and worth in this game.

PAUL FORD

End

"Jit" did not join us until we returned from Brownwood but he soon proved his mettle. He was fast, heady, and a remarkable receiver of passes.

GEORGE HAMILTON

Center

George was no stranger, as he played with us in '23. He was back this year at his old center position and acquitted himself wonderfully. He played every minute of every game.

AT SAN ANGELO

SUL ROSS 7.....TEXAS TECH. 21

This game was a regular battle royal. The Lobos went into the game to win, fought hard, and lost a good, honest, clean struggle. Two passes, Bell to Ford and Kell to Ford, netted the Lobos their touchdown. The third quarter resolved itself into a punting duel in which Captain Townsend of the Lobos showed himself equal to the occasion. The final break came in the last few minutes of the fourth quarter, when the Lobos gave way to greater numbers and were forced to yield two touchdowns in quick succession.

CEDRIC ANTHONY

End

A continuous hard fighting dependable end, a player well schooled in the ethics of football—that was Ced.

CLIFFORD KELL

Half

Kell joined the squad late but soon won a place by his ability. He was excellent at passing and this feature helped to win many games.

AT ALPINE

SUL ROSS 0.....SCHREINER INSTITUTE 7

This was one of the hardest fought games of the season. It was an exhibition of straight, clean football from the start to the finish. The Schreiner team was well schooled in both defensive and offensive playing. The Lobos missed a chance to score in the early part of the first quarter. The Schreiner touchdown came as the result of a series of end runs.

SAM NELSON
End

Sam was a sure, hard tackler and an end who used his head. He covered punts well and was a good receiver.

LEE SMITH
Fullback

Lee as fullback was ideally placed. He was an expert line plunger and end runner.

AT ABILENE

SUL ROSS 13.....McMURRY 7

McMurry's defense crumbled in the second half after a hard and game effort to stop the onslaught of the Lobos. The fact that the Lobos made twenty-two first downs to the Indians' nine, shows that McMurry was outelassed in every way. Townsend, Bell, Smith, and Cowan of the Lobos starred on the offensive. The McMurry team was in striking distance of their goal once, but lacked the punch to put the ball over. Their lone touchdown came as the result of an intercepted pass from the sixty yard line

FOYE TERRY

Half

Terry was the fastest man on the squad and if he ever got away, he always went for a long gain.

GORDON DENMAN

Half

Plenty of speed made "Dennie" feared by his opponents. He was a good side stepper and broken field runner.

AT ALPINE

SUL ROSS 68.....EL PASO JUNIOR COLLEGE 0

In this game the Lobos ran wild, as is indicated by the score. Cowan, of the Lobos, was the shining light—making five of Sul Ross' touchdowns. The Junior College team put forth a game and clean fight until the last whistle, but they were completely overwhelmed. The Sul Ross Coyotes were put into the game the last quarter and proved themselves quite equal to their opponents.

FUQUA YOUNGER

Tackle

"Duck" played his second year as Lobo tackle, and he filled the position as only he can. He was a hard worker and a good fighter.

R. G. KELLY

Fullback

This was R. G.'s third year with Sul Ross and he gets better every year. His hard tackling and line plunging have won many games for Sul Ross.

AT STATE COLLEGE

SUL ROSS 13.....NEW MEXICO A. & M. 12

The Lobos returned from New Mexico with a clean slate. The Aggies proved a worthy foe and it was only by dint of hard fighting that the Lobos were able to win. This was the first Aggie defeat on their home field in five years. The game, as a whole, was a bit slow, due to the sluggish condition of the field. The Aggies were the cleanest team met by the Lobos during the season.

KERMIT ALLEN
Quarter

A heady quarter back with plenty of fighting spirit—that was “Red”. He ran the team well and displayed excellent sportsmanship throughout the season.

W. H. GRONDE
Yell Leader

The man behind the teams and the leader of the twelfth man, Gronde could always keep his crowd yelling, and his cry of “C’m on now bunch” never failed to inspire the Lobos.

REVIEW OF THE SEASON

The close of the football season of '25 found Sul Ross with the best football team she had ever put on the field. The Lobos won five out of eight games and amassed a total of one hundred and fifty-eight points to their opponents' sixty.

The first game with Randolph College ended in a victory for the Lobos by a twenty-six to nothing score. The team then journeyed to Brownwood and lost to Daniel Baker, six to nothing. The third game was with Sul Ross' ancient enemy, the School of Mines. Lobo fight triumphed in a thirty-one to seven score. The next game was played with New Mexico A. & M. and was a victory for Sul Ross, thirteen to twelve. In a loosely played game Sul Ross lost to Texas Tech at the San Angelo Fair, twenty-one to seven; on her own field, Sul Ross lost at the hands of the Schreiner Institute, seven to nothing. The next two games with McMurry and El Paso Junior College were victories for Sul Ross, by thirteen to seven, and sixty-eight to nothing, respectively.

Basketball

CAPTAIN LEE SMITH

CAPTAIN LEE SMITH

During the two years that Smith has played on the Lobo Squad, he has developed into one of the best guards in the state. He is especially good at long shots. Good natured and likable, he has made an excellent leader.

FUQUA YOUNGER

This will make Younger's second year with Sul Ross, and it will also bring him his second letter in basketball. Well-liked by his teammates and the student body, an aggressive guard, he has been a happy addition to the Lobo bunch both years.

CLIFFORD KELL

Kell made a perfect running mate for Townsend. With ability to come in for tip-offs, with his accuracy at passing and goal throwing, he was a valuable addition to the team.

WESLEY TOWNSEND

This is Townsend's third year with the Sul Ross Basketball Team. He has been a star during his stay here, and his fighting spirit crops out in basketball as it does in football. He served as captain one year and his speed and accuracy have always made him a menace to his opponents.

PAUL FORD

Ford made a name for himself in the games against the Texas Longhorns, with his all-around basketball playing. He has consistently outjumped every opposing center, and is a sure goal shooter. Fast on the court and good at team work, he was always a terror to the opposition.

JOHN ADAMS

This season makes the fourth for Adams in Sul Ross. He never gives up, but fights from start to finish. As a stationary guard, Adams was one of the main-stays of the team.

CLAUDE BROWN

Brown played on last year's basket ball team, winning a sweater in the sport. He is fast and it is as a forward that he has stayed with the team. When Brown is at his best, he is one of the most accurate goal ringers on the pack.

BO CAVET

Honorably mentioned as an all state high school man of last year, Cavet has proved himself worthy of a berth with the Lobos. He is a good guard, and his timely long shooting has been a big factor in winning games.

Kell, Bozarth, Cavet, Ford, Cross, Townsend, Adams, Bell, Allen, Smith, Brown, Younger, Wood.

Women's Athletics

Sul Ross W. A. A.

TO teach each girl the wisdom of good health, to find for her a common meeting ground with her sister students, and to interest her in activities that will give her profit and pleasure after she leaves college—these are some of the goals to which the Women's Athletic Association has been working.

The organization sponsors and promotes the various sports carried on by the girls, as volley ball, tennis, swimming, rifle, and hiking. The attitude toward athletics for girls has been that of group activity and welfare rather than that of individual supremacy. Since practically every girl in Sul Ross is a member of the W.A.A., it has been the most convenient medium for the planning of the recreational activities for girls. "Dress-up" parties, camps, and numerous hiking trips have served to bind the girls closer together, and to provide enjoyment for those who are least liable to find it in other extra curricular fields.

Perhaps the greatest service W.A.A. could render the college would be that of functioning in the life of every girl—in balancing her activities, in providing for individual expression, and in laying for each one the foundations of the friendships that mean so much to the college girl.

The West Texas Historical and Scientific Society

THE WEST TEXAS HISTORICAL AND SCIENTIFIC SOCIETY, a new organization with the object of promoting and uncovering both modern and ancient history of West Texas, has aroused a great deal of interest. Not only are the people of this section interested, but many letters have been received from people of widely scattered places. Many people of prominence in scientific fields have written to endorse the society, and some have asked permission to become charter members. Dr. Fewkes of Smithsonian Institution made the statement that this particular section had greater possibilities than any other region north of Mexico, and that it had a further advantage in that it lies on a margin between the cliff-dwellers and plains-tribe civilizations. Other inquiries and letters of encouragement have been received from Arizona, California, and even Canada. The Society has about fifty-five members at present.

In the museum the work of the classifier has grown from day to day. Many articles, both intrinsically and historically valued, have filled the six fire-proof cases, until a valued collection has already gathered. The anthropological specimens stand out above the rest in rarity and worth. Here there are beads of pure turquoise, aged specimens of Indian weaving and rope-making, and sandals and articles of pottery in an excellent state of preservation. There are many articles in the museum that were used hundreds of years ago by the Indians of West Texas. Besides these, the museum presents a range of specimens coming from Japan, the Fiji Islands, Lebanon, and other countries.

Judge Roy Bean

THE Big Bend country is peculiarly rich in legendary history and characters. One of the most interesting of its stories, founded on fact, is the history of one Judge Roy Bean, known as the "Law West of the Pecos". In 1882 in the small town of Langtry, then called Vinegaron, Judge Bean settled. A self-appointed judge and juror, he was famous for his many novel decisions.

Coming from the East, he set up his reign along the line of the Southern Pacific when the road was being built from San Antonio to El Paso. The largest railroad camp in the country was located at Langtry. Judge Bean saw prospects of some easy money; so he pitched camp and built a couple of shacks,—a home and a place of business. The sign that hung outside the saloon read, "Ice-cold Beer, Law West of the Pecos."

One of Judge Bean's celebrated decisions was given in connection with the killing of a Chinaman, who was employed on the railroad. One night after pay day, a gambler killed a Chinaman in a dispute over a card game. He was tried by Judge Bean on the front porch of the saloon, and found not guilty; for Bean said his law-book, which was an old Texas statute and the only written law he possessed, did not show that it was a violation of the law to kill a Chinaman.

One other occurrence may be mentioned as proof that Judge Roy Bean was the "Law West of the Pecos". Bean one day found a man dead on the railroad—murdered or killed accidentally, he knew not which; but in searching him, he found a pistol and forty dollars. He tried the dead man in his court and fined him forty dollars for carrying a gun.

Another incident shows his supremacy as judge and juror over all that happened to come his way. A traveling man purchased a bottle of beer at Bean's saloon and paid with a twenty dollar bill. The bartender, not having the change, referred the customer to Judge Bean, who was playing cards in another part of the room. Terribly incensed at the interruption, Judge Bean fined the "defendant" nineteen dollars and seventy-five cents for "disturbing the court".

An interesting story is told of Judge Bean in connection with the naming of the town of Langtry. He had a visitor to his little town one day—the story runs—, a girl named Nellie Langtry, who was posing as an actress. Bean became very fond of her and offered to build her an opera house of her own if she would come back and make the town her home. She partly promised; and, after she had gone he did build her a house—a sixteen by sixteen. He painted it white and had a sign placed across the front, "Lily Langtry's Opera House". The town was called Langtry, and to this day it bears that name.

Judge Bean said marriage ceremonies; he granted divorces; and he tried all manner of cases. In other words, he composed the city council, and the front porch of his saloon was his hall of justice.

Judge Bean lived most of his life at Langtry; he died and was buried there.

THE WRITERS' GUILD

RICHARD GILLESPIE . . . . .President

NANCY WATSON . . . . .Sec'y and Treas.

No education is complete which leaves knowledge in theoretical form. Our college curricula provide a basis for the activities of life, but necessarily the college must leave to the student the execution of the knowledge gained. With this idea in mind, in the fall of 1925, THE WRITERS' GUILD was recognized as an active organization in Sul Ross. Membership is limited to those who have literary tendencies and are interested in the furtherance of literary art. THE WRITERS' GUILD hopes to develop the latent talent of some, the active genius of others, and to provide for the rest a pleasing avocation.

The Boss of The JA Ranch

Well do I remember our first meeting; it was on a beautiful evening in June. The sun was now scarce three hours high. Since the early hours of the morning I had ridden, not as a cowboy over the range, but hard and fast—to the limit of my horse—as a messenger with important news. How out of place trouble seemed in this beautiful, arid, rugged, wasteland near the Rio Grande. Quiet had reigned all day over the vast spaces of cactus, grease wood, and catclaw that lay about me in every direction. Quiet—save for the jingle of my spurs, the squeak of my saddle, or the hiss of the locust, at mid day, hidden in the sage brush.

Perhaps a score of miles to the west the Chinati mountains loomed up, and in their foothills, my destination. The sun was low when I rode up to the corrals of the JA ranch. As I swung my horse up the trail that led from the Cibola creek I beheld the "Boss" sitting on the top rail of the corral gate. His broad brimmed hat was pushed back on his head; a loose knotted, dull scarlet handkerchief sagged from his throat, and one casual thumb was hooked in a cartridge belt that slanted across his hips. As I approached the corrals he climbed down from his perch with the undulations of a tiger; smooth and easy, as if his muscles flowed beneath his skin. A slim young giant he was; more beautiful than a picture.

"Good evening, son," he greeted me, for my coming had been expected for days. His voice was gentle and drawling with a sunny southern accent. His face was weather beaten. His clothes were soiled with the dust of travel, but no shabbiness of garment or dust of travel could mar the splendor that seemed to radiate from this splendid young rider of the west. In his deep blue eyes, in his rugged clean cut face, in his graceful easy step, in the whole man, there dominated a sense of power.

My message delivered, and astride a top horse of the JA brand, I bid the "Boss" good-bye and faded away into the black stillness of the night to carry my summons farther into the sparsely settled wasteland. As I rode that night, by guess and instinct, around the southern flank of the Chinati mountains, the "Boss" of the JA ranch seemed to be riding by my side. For, to me, he was the mountains and desert in one—quiet, sympathetic, steady, bold, and massive. And as I thought of him, I marveled at this handsome son of the west whose glance was so straight and frank and fearless.

—R. W. M.

From the Hilltop

For thirty minutes I have been toiling up the hill side. Now, having reached the crest, I sit down with my back against an age-old boulder that is mottled with splotches of lavender and green and yellow lichens. I am tired, breathless, contented.

The wind blows my hair in my eyes, and the late sunshine of a mellow afternoon leaves the print of its lips upon my face. A little butterfly brushes white wings against my fingers as it flits by, and a small, sleek bug with a gray stripe down its back crawls over a rock. The hills are filled with stillness and wind and warm sun.

Down there in the valley is the town—the brown and yellow town, green roofed. Its white roads interlace like a girl's smooth fingers when her hands are folded. Its blossoming apple orchards are blots of color, soft and blurry like eiderdown baby blankets. And there, at the foot of my hill, is the abandoned cemetery I passed through on my way up.

It is a cemetery where perhaps a half a hundred have slept for more than a decade—alone, a part, forgotten. Out of many of the sunken graves, grows a thriving abundance of cockle burs. White-face cattle run rampant over what mounds are left. Many of the grave stones lie face downward; others are gradually crumbling away. The few that remain tell an appealing story of those who died at sixteen, twenty-three, twenty-six, five, nineteen, thirty years of age. It is a graveyard of the young.

From my hill the grave stones look like white dice rolled out of a careless hand upon the earth's brown surface; but there is one among them that is like a slender finger pointing up to God.

I sit here on the summit of my hill, drinking in the sun and wind, and feeling life go pulsing through my body; but I cannot quit thinking of the dead down there at the foot of the hill. Lying there, silent and unseen, they seem unreal, remote, intangible; but the realization comes to me with dizzying poignance that once they lived, as I am living now; that once they sat, as I am sitting here, and drank in the wind and sun; that once to them, as it is to me today, death was unreal, remote, intangible. I know they had their dreams, their memories, their aspirations; that they reached out to life and asked for happiness and love. And then death took them. Eyes that were not tired were closed to seeing; hands that were not worn were stilled from doing; hearts that were not weary were sealed with silence. And they came down there to sleep while life was in its springtime. For them there is no more sun, no more wind, no more apple orchards, blurry white in blossom time. This thought makes me wonder with the poet:

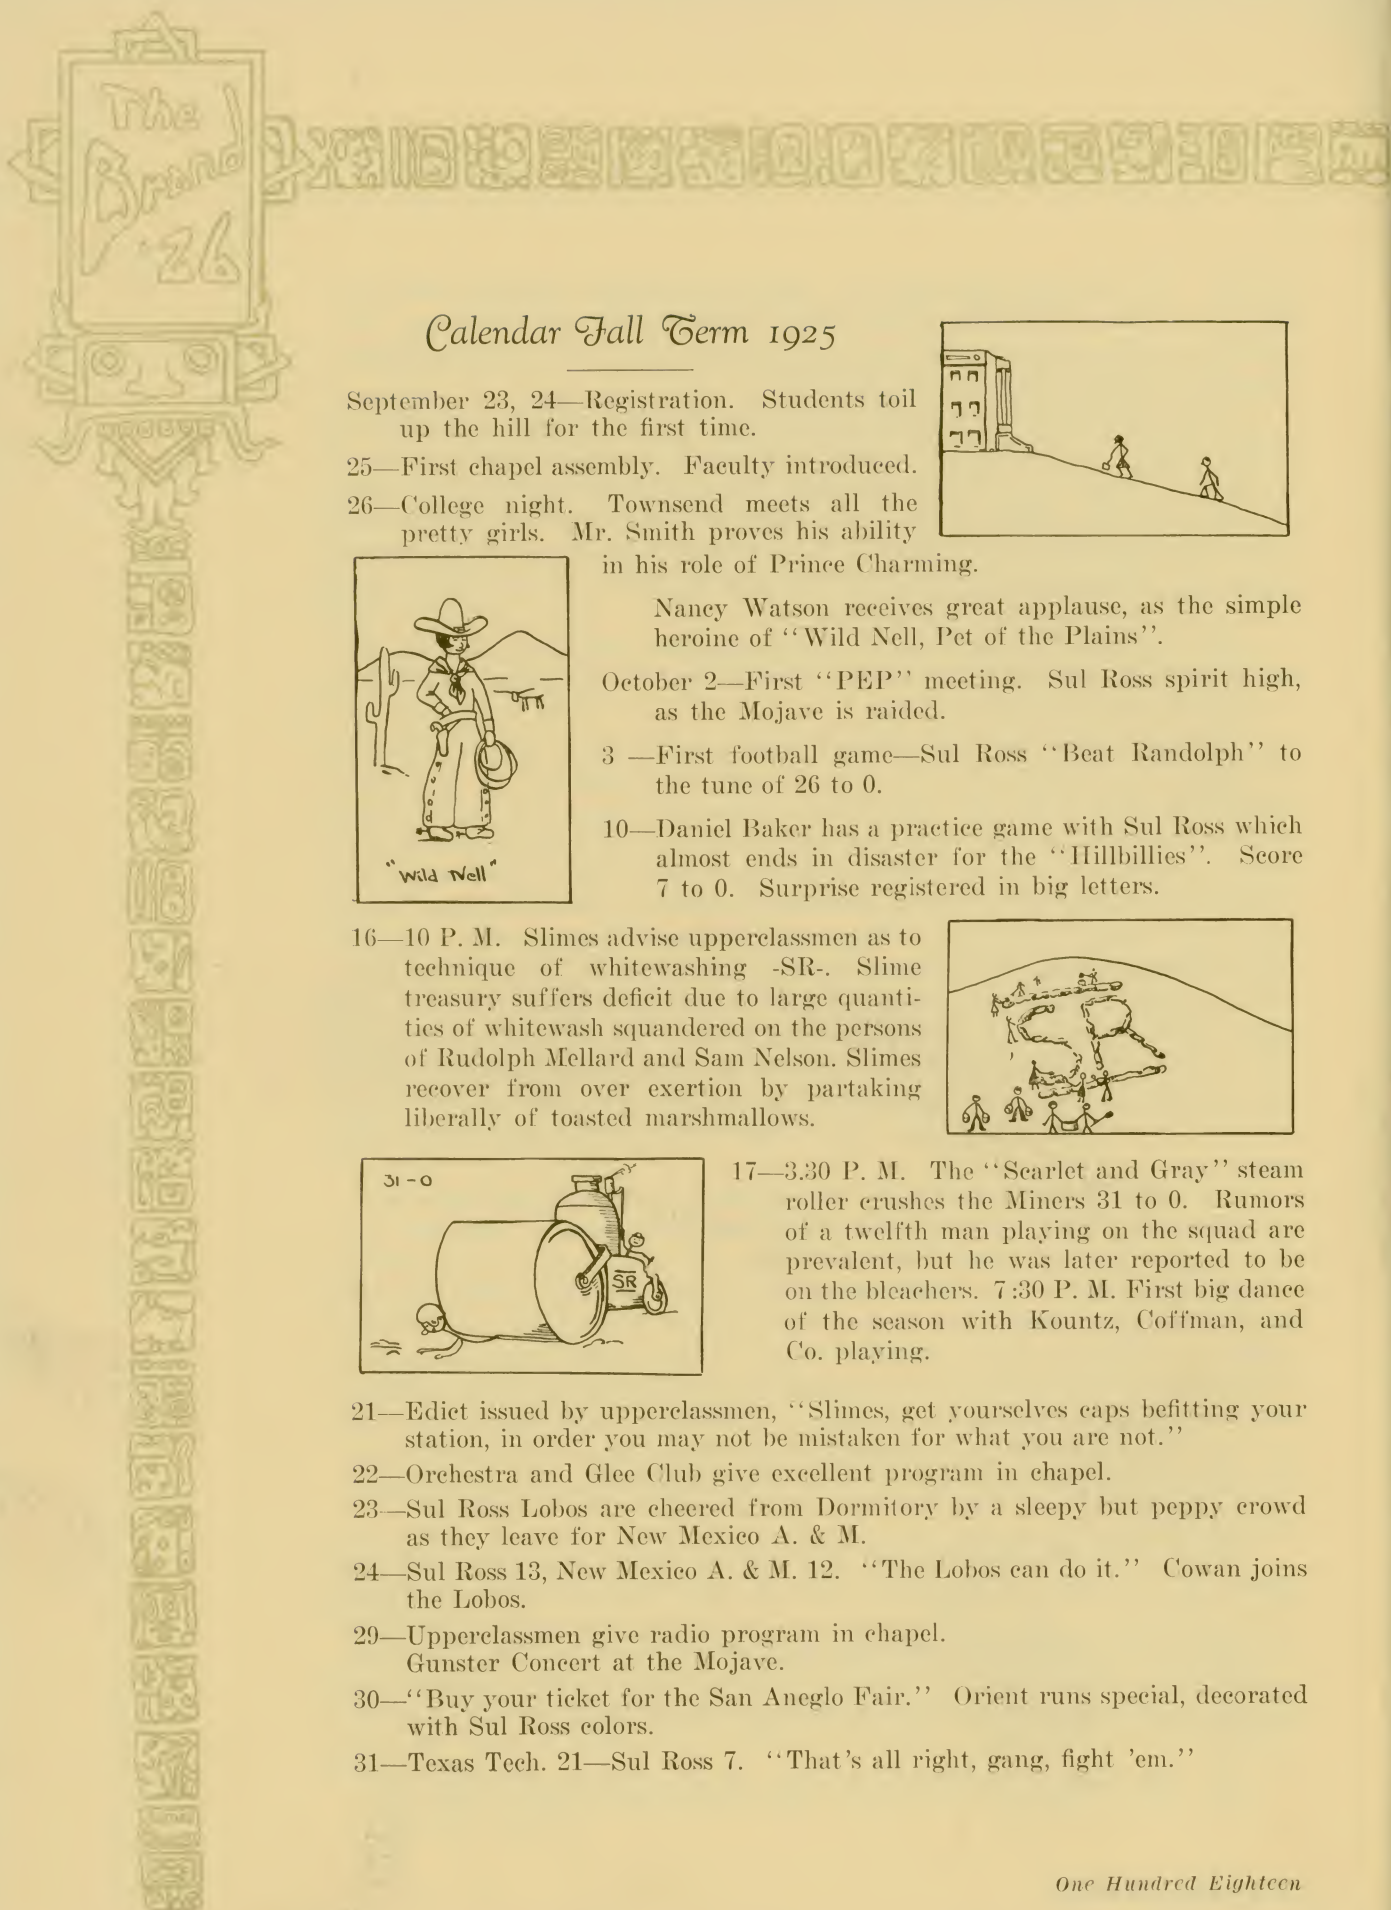

*"Pocahontas' body, lovely as a poplar, sweet as a red haw in November or a pawpaw in May, did she wonder? does she remember?
. . . in the dust, in the cool tombs?"*

My heart tells me that these young people were not glad to die, that rest and safety had no charms for them. I have walked through the valley of the shadow of death, and have tasted the dregs of the cup; and I have found them bitter. I know that there was in those souls, as there is in mine, a love of battle, a zest for danger, a longing for attainment. No minister or philosopher can tell me that it is better to lie inert, unfeeling, even though with all peace and quietness, there at the hill's feet, than to climb with surging soul and singing heart to the hill's crest.

The sob that fills my throat and the tears that blind my eyes rise from the absurd pity of youth. I know that when I am old I can look upon those graves with complacence. But now, there is in my heart only pity for their young dead. Pity that they are dead to a world like mine, with a brown and yellow town and smooth roads interlacing. Pity that their only epitaphs are the memories that lie in somebody's heart and white grave stones like dice upon the earth's brown surface.

But then, I am not forgetting the slender finger pointing up to God.

—Freda Gibson.

Joyous songs we'll raise
Hail to thee, O Sul Ross College,
Thee we'll gladly praise.

Where a handclasp means a welcome,
Friendship glad to share.

Branding Iron

TO those who may suffer from the sting of the "Branding Iron"; to those who have suffered at the hands of our ever vigilant "Hawkshaw"; to those "Slimes" who have suffered upper classmen atrocities and cruelties; to those baby organizations so diligently brought to our attention by chapel announcements; to those who have suffered from amateur photography at the hands of persistent "Brand Illustrators"; and to those who have furnished the spice and humor for our "Sul Ross Fun Shop" through their demonstrations of embryonic "Amores", of Freshmen ignorance, and of a talent for loafing in the corridors to "sling the slang", of powdering noses, and of attempting the complicated steps of the Charleston, we do this day dedicate "The Branding Iron". We hereby assume the responsibilities connected with such a dedication.

Signed by

THE BRANDING IRON STAFF.

ORIENT DEPOT

The most beautiful and pleasing section of any city is the vicinity of the depot. Alpine is no exception to the rule. Here you see not only the magnificent edifice called the Orient Depot, but the surrounding beauty which is found only at Alpine on the "roof of the world."

BACK OF COLLEGE

Campus scenes portraying the surrounding beauty of our college always pull at our heart strings, as they bring memories of different beautiful angles of dear "Ol' Sul Ross." Here we have a very pleasing angle; that of the back of our main building. The windows, the grounds, and the very bricks in the wall are magnificent.

BERKELEY HALL

"The Dormitory for women has been thoroughly remodeled and no pains have been spared to make this an ideal home for young women who attend Sul Ross." In this picture we see the proof of this statement. Could anything look more cosy or more restful than the beautiful shade trees in the distance, the washing on the line, or the long winding veranda with the tall white pillars which are themselves the symbol of old fashioned comfort? This is what Berkeley Hall means to young women who want to live in a home of beauty and art.

HEART OF THE CITY

Long, straight avenues shaded on either side by tall, spreading, shady telephone posts! That's Alpine. The pavement glistening like glass in the West Texas sun, the electric wires which lead to our electric signs and trolley cars, and the peculiar construction known as windmills, are all seen on the streets of Alpine. The Post Office is located on the corner of this beautiful street.

POPULAR SUL ROSS STUDENT WEDS

MUSICIANS QUELLED BY THE LAW

Artistic temperament proved of no avail when Brothers Inman and Gronde—Waldemar Henry, tried to explain to the High Sheriff the causes of incontrollable and somewhat musical tones going up and down College Avenue late last night.

"B-b-but I-I can explain it all, Mistah Sheriff Man", vainly expostulated Pud, pulling back, frightened beyond control.

"May I ask one question", put in Gronde, "why am I, a Baptist preacher's son, being locked up?"

"Well, if you can't control them dern clarinets, I'll put you where they won't be so bothersome to my clients", said the Sheriff from the jail-house steps.

"We'll never serenade again", determined and in unison.

The two boys were turned loose, went straight home, and Mrs. Engle says they have been quiet since.

Editor's Note:—Though slightly touched by the reporter, this episode is historically correct.

FAVORITE FACULTY PHRASES

Mr. Morelock: "Now as Burns says 'When you write your letter home'—"

Mr. Boatright: "All right, and this is, Miss Granger? All right, Miss Granger, wake up".

Miss Parsell: "Now remember, the main thing is to keep the expenditure within our limits".

Miss Carlisle: "Oh, this is just fierce bad".

Miss Evans: "Now the thing is—".

Mr. Allen: "Oh, well, that's not on the subject".

Mr. Ratliff: "Er, ah. I was just wondering. By the way, did you ever hear this one?"

Miss Elliott: "And you know yourself that a cut is just as bad as a car ride at night."

Miss Cowan: "Will the following students please call at my office?"

Mr. Gilley: "I've told that young 'un 10,000,084 times to keep away from the Dormitory."

Miss Sweet: "The only dates I know are 1492, 1776, and Monty's".

Miss Linn: "You must get your chapel seat".

Mrs. Voules: "Come, Delbert, we must away".

Mr. Penrod: "The best car on the market"—Yesterday a Ford, today a Dodge, tomorrow a Star, and so on, far into the night.

Friends were shocked at the announcement made by George Hamilton to the effect that his room-mate and brother, Jonas Hamilton, was taken in matrimony by an unknown lady during the Christmas holidays.

Miss Zaza Trick, a Senior of How Hard Pain College, is the lucky lady. "She has worked hard for four years", stated Jonas, "and now victory is deservedly hers".

"Oh, deah, I know there never was anothaw like my Jonah", Mrs. Hamilton cooed, on being questioned by the reporter. "I'm the happiest guhl in Texas".

Mrs. Hamilton will remain in Groundwood, while Mr. Hamilton will study House Planning in C. I. A.

The Scandal Sheet joins with their host of friends in wishing the newly-weds happiness, home, health, and hash.

Mrs. Smith: "Indian dancing develops grace—look at me".

Coach Graves: "You know, .....?....., girls in a small town get a fellow in trouble".

Mr. Walker: "Oh, shucks, where are those twins?"

Miss Peek: "Sh-sh-sh-sh".

Mr. Cottle: "Now the thing that makes me tired".

Miss Billingsley: "I tell you, I don't know where my money's gone since I got my Buick".

Miss Boardman: "I think it's lovely, now don't you really?"

Miss Batey, on seeing the moon: "Y-e-o-w-h-!!!"

Miss Keener: "What do you expect me to do? I'm not going to do it at all. I'm just hired to paint, etc."

SLOW-BOS TROUNCE ELEPHANTS

In a slow rain the "locals" added another pelt to their credit last week sometime when they steam rolled the White Elephants, Jose Cuervo, Captain, of Ojinaga, to the old tune of 15 to 0.

The visitors took the defeat manfully and returned directly to the river to wet their troubles.

THE SCANDAL SHEET

STAFF

We will not publish the names of the staff members, except to assure our trusting readers that the editor is not W. Burchard Pursel.

THE BRIDGE KNOWS—AN EDITORIAL

Inanimate objects often are capable of intelligence, thinks a prominent biologist in the Freshman Class. The cub reporter of the staff, after having read this statement in one of the monthly-on-time publications (student), decided he would learn first hand from the bridge on College Avenue what that bridge's philosophy of life might be. The bridge, on being questioned, made this statement:

"You may quote me as saying that I wish only to relate those things in my life which might, in some measure, elevate my readers.

"In the first place, I was not always thus. Time was when I was entirely wooden; I was easily shaken and not very safe. Even the Freshies can remember when my concrete foundation was laid. 'Oh, those many rideless days!' I can hear you say. But I knew all along that I wanted a firm bottom that I might better serve you through making speeding safe and comfortable.

"I can help you most by telling you how to get a ride: never look back at the oncoming car until it honks. Simple, yet it's true.

"Gay revellers have o'er me passed. Happy couples, linked and almost united, have slowly walked over my little brother, the footbridge. Lincolns, Stars, Fords have passed over me day by day. I have truly met the world.

"Then there were the bad Sub-Collegians who slipped under me to light their cedar-bark cigarettes, unseen by Mr. Cottle. One boy, not a Sub-Normal student, once looked out too quickly and got tar on his hat. Moral: A guilty smoker should be both wise and careful.

"In conclusion you may say to my audience that I feel that all of us have a place in life. Mine is to keep you from falling into the ditch, actually, as Miss Cowan's is, theoretically."

FIND THE SLIME

Slime Cody was lost in Jit Ford's little red riding sweater at the Dormitory this morning.

FACULTY MEMBER HAS NEW CAR

Miss Bill Lingsley was the proud owner of a new car Thursday. The staff photographer got this snap as she was measuring the gas.

NOTICE!

There must be Order in the library—if you'll only look for it. The Librarian will be glad to help you find what you want.

So Nay Peake,

Young College Miss Meets Oncoming Engineer in Dodge Bravely

Friends and faculty alike were shocked at the narrow escape of Miss Triplett and Mr. Handsome last Saturday when the plucky Chevrolet of the former tried to combat the heavier Dodge of the latter on the Bridge near Bro. Penrod's house.

Conflicting tales are told, but by-standing pedestrians believe the fault to be mostly with the city government for not placing a policeman on this congested pontoon.

Miss Triplett lost a rosy pink complexion and was late to Miss Parsell's English class. Mr. Handsome had a bent fender and forgot the mail (noon).

No paid up insurance was toted by either contestant.

LEARN THE CHARLESTON

Why be a wall flower? Plenty of young men and women are taking advantage of the Loeffler method of modern Charlestoning. Phone 128 for engagements. Act Now! Louis Alfonso Loeffler, called "The Adept Floor Artist".

FINE COWS

NIGHT

Night—cold night, still night
A hush of the infinite o'er all Earth
Creatures of every kind asleep,
Wrapped in Night's all enveloping sleeve—
A cry—a crash—a scream—a thud!
A flashing on of lights, a gasp as warm feet touch frigid floors.
A hurrying of feet—a low moan
Quiet—breathless quiet—still night.
"Why don't you get in on time so we wouldn't have to pay for so many broken window panes?"

THE Brand is done, and our task, finished. We have completed, in a way, what we undertook to do. Of course, we have erred. What we so enthusiastically planned as innovations in year books, we found had been used by other staffs. Our new sections have dwindled to ordinary pages. Our "bright ideas" have become dingy in their execution. Yet we are happy with it all. Even the budgeting of expenses unexpected has been a pleasure.

And here we would pause in appreciation of the cooperation of our friends, the business men of the Big Bend, who have contributed so largely to our success. They have never yet failed us; may we prove worthy of their faith.

In this connection, also, may we thank you who belong more particularly to us, our fellow students. You have made our year-book possible. May the Brand of '26 be a pleasant reminder of a year well spent.

THE STAFF.

This image shows a single sheet of cream-colored paper designed as an autograph book. At the top center, the word "Autographs" is printed in a large, elegant black serif font. Below the title, the entire page is ruled with thin, light gray horizontal lines, providing space for signatures or messages. A decorative border composed of small black squares runs along all four edges of the page.
